Her Timely Gift.

In common with other women, Mrs. Brown delights in a bargain, and when she observed the advertisement of a great fire and water sale in one of the department stores she repaired there without delay. There were many fine works of science, travel, history, religion and fiction to be had for a song each, but her eyes rested on a handsomely bound copy of "The Life of General Grant," and she bought it for her brother. Of course, it would not be fair to tell what she paid for it.

"The next day her brother came over to thank her. 'It's fine,' he said. 'I haven't got very far in it yet, but I know it's going to be good. When little Jane gets along a little further in her German I'm going to have her read me a bit of it every evening. I make rather slow progress of it myself.'

"In German?" gasped the giver.

"Yes," said the brother, "it's written in German, a mighty handy thing to have around the house." Since then Mrs. Brown has never bought a fire or water book without looking carefully on the inside of it.—Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

Paid as He Went.

Patient—Then you think it's all up with me, doctor?
Doctor—I'm afraid so.
"Well, we must all die once, and I may as well go now as afterward. You're sure I'm going?"
"Yes."

"Then let me have your bill."
"My bill! My dear sir, this is very unusual. You should give your thoughts to most serious matters."
"My motto has always been 'pay as you go,' and now that I am going I want to pay."
So he paid and went.

S. L. JOHNSON, Secretary.

The situation continues to become more serious in Cape Colony and the probable outcome of present feeling among the Dutch population, which is large in the colony will be a revolt against British authority. A careful investigation of the disloyal feeling there is at this time in the colony includes not less than ninety per cent of the Dutch inhabitants who are waiting an opportunity to go into active war.

The opportunity sought is an invasion by the Transvaal and Free State Boers of Cape Colony. These men have entered the colony as they are aware of conditions existing in it, among the people who are Dutch or are Dutch in feeling. General Kitchener is sending men south to the Cape as speedily as the means of communication at his command will allow.

It is quite evident from late information received about conditions in South Africa that the war spirit is not broken, but is more determined than it was a year ago. The policy pursued by England does not have the effect intended by bringing the Boers into subjection to British rule.

The time has passed when men by brute force can be made to tremble before superior power through that kind of force applied as a means of war. The more it is applied the more desperate men become till life is regarded as not worth preserving when it is present. The late British reverses indicate more active and determined war by the Boers than at any time since it began.

The Boers are not in such large bodies as they were at the beginning of the trouble and for that reason they are capable of making more rapid movements than large bodies of men are in a position to sustain in active war. The Boers appear from general descriptions given and reports made to have taken a flying column order, which is a change from the more heavy system required, at the opening of the war when they were conducting a policy to procure a surrender by investing large bodies of British troops and by attacking them or by wearing them out.

There being no more necessity for such large bodies of men, the light column order has been adopted, which is proving more effective in the wilds of Africa against the British than the more modern system of big guns and large bodies of men. The English are not in a position to contend successfully with the Boer system of light order. Their supplies come from the coast; communication with the coast must be maintained to meet the requirements of the army. It requires a large body of men to keep open the line of communication that connects the supply base with the army, which operates for and against the invaders. By keeping the supply base open the army is maintained, but the number of men employed to guard and keep it open is a continued source of weakness.

The British move in large bodies and take their supplies with the troops in column, which has an effect to reduce the speed of the column and the movement is slow. The base of Boer supply is in the hills and valleys of the country, which source of supply the British have attacked through the destruction of homes and by confiscation of cattle and other stock and the destruction of other property belonging chiefly to non-combatants, which removal and destruction of property has been a means to intensifying the war spirit—not only in the Transvaal and Free State countries, but has had a disquieting and war stimulating effect wherever a Boer resides in South Africa and is the cause in chief for the disloyal temper at this time there is in Cape Colony.

The British have been engaged so long in making war upon savage and half civilized people that they seem to have become of the opinion that there are no other terms connected with war than an unconditional surrender, which should be brought about by any methods at their command. These were methods and terms applied in war during the savagery of the middle ages, when people consulted their gods as they consulted men about any enterprise on hand, whose answers were given as a rule according to the desires and wishes of those who were seeking the opinions and direction of the gods in any intended villainy.

It may be the change which has come since our savage ancestors consulted their gods, chiefly consists in eating turkey and plum pudding on Christmas and eating eggs on Easter Sunday, but in the change there is a meaning that would be well to observe when making war upon those who have become addicted to the habit of eating turkey and plum pudding on Christmas and eating eggs on Easter Sunday. These outward signs of an inward spirit should be recognized among the chief differences there are in men of this age when compared with the spirit and understanding of men one thousand years ago.

A Frisco Editor Tackles Matrimony.

Something happened last night. A Mr. Carpenter, one of the editors of the Examiner, stole away to Reno with the maid of his choice—she had been somebody else's choice once but divorces are easily obtained in California, even if the divorce is not allowed to marry again within a year.

Who the maiden was and what Mr. Carpenter's intentions are, the JOURNAL wots not, for they didn't register. Les Malotte was master of ceremonies and kept the whole affair mum. Rev. Phelps tied the knot, but he didn't cheapen a word about the ceremony. County Clerk Fogg, who is sued the license, was also discreet.

When the JOURNAL arrives on the exchange editors' tables in Frisco tomorrow Editor Carpenter will discover that the cat is out of the bag.

Had not so much mystery attended this nuptial incident, the JOURNAL would not have deemed it worthy an 18-point headline. Mr. Malotte is to be congratulated on the excellent manner in which he kept the affair a secret.

"Human Hearts."

Many a hearty laugh rings through the house when "Human Hearts" is playing. Many a soul-rending tear is shed. The drama is replete with interest, incident following incident so closely it seems that the author's invention must find its limit, but no, the action sustains its novelty and force to the very close of the last act which alone is worth seeing—a silent story told to a hushed audience who struggle with tears.

HE DIED BY HIS OWN HAND

Gordon Freeman Is no More.

SOLVES THE GREAT MYSTERY

In a Sudden Fit of Depression He Blows Out His Brains.

Gordon Freeman is no more. The brave young cavalry officer, whose exploits upon foreign battle fields caused us all to be proud of the Second Lieutenant of Troop A, Nevada Cavalry, lie in the morgue with shattered skull and upon his face the peace that wars are made for.

He is dead and by his own hand. No more will he hear the rattle of musketry, no longer will he urge his comrades on to victory. The voice of friend cannot pierce the silence of his brain.

Last evening he was full of life and hope, today his friends and comrades weep around his bier.

Between 9 and 10 last night he went to the home he shared with the Fisher Brothers across the river. He went into the room of James Fisher, saluted him with a cheery, "Haven't you gone to bed early?" Then he went into the kitchen and closed the door.

James slept. An hour later he suddenly awoke and heard a thud as though a body struck the floor. While he was dressing E. E. Fisher came in and found Lieutenant Freeman lying on the floor in a pool of blood.

Officer Leeper and Coroner Peers were summoned and the news quickly spread through the town that Freeman had killed himself.

A pale-faced, breathless crowd gathered at the scene of the tragedy. Evidently the poor fellow had been seized with despondency when he entered the kitchen. He wrote this note in a tablet:

"Fisher Bros. (Private)—Dear Boys: Please have my body removed to the morgue and buried as quickly and quietly as possible. Don't send any of my 'stuff' home. Keep it yourselves or destroy it. Best wishes to all. Good-bye, FREEMAN."

Then he carefully removed coat, vest and necktie. He placed the muzzle of a 30-30 Winchester in his mouth and touched his foot to the trigger. Blood and brains spurted to the ceiling, and the spirit of Gordon Freeman returned to the God who sent it.

Lieutenant Freeman was a native of Missouri, where his brother resides. He has a mother and sister in Canyon City, Colorado. He was aged 30 years, half of which time he lived in Reno. When the Spanish war broke out he entered as first sergeant in Troop A, Nevada Cavalry, and saw eighteen months' hard service in the Philippines. When Lieutenant Gignoux entered the regular army, Sergeant Freeman was promoted to the second lieutenantcy of his troop.

The suicide was partly due to impaired health, but mainly to hereditary suicidal mania. It is said that his father and a brother both died by their own hands.

May there be rest and peace and a crown of happiness for the brave soldier boy.

A Dance Tonight at Huffakers.

A grand holiday party and dance is to be given to-night (Friday) at the new hall near Huffaker's school house, five miles south of Reno.

The committee having charge has spared no expense in preparing for the pleasure of their guests, and an evening of delightful pleasure is assured to those who attend.

The roads are good and the moon is just right. Get up a jolly party and go out in the country for an evening, and you will realize what a good time really is.

Strikes in Pyramid.

R. J. Tibbets is in from Pyramid. He reports two strikes as having been made there within the past week.

The shaft in the Bird's Eye claim, owned by Dragovich & Tibbets, has broken into a formation of decomposed quartz, a sample of which assayed $36 gold and $2 silver. The lode seems to be eight feet wide.

In an adjoining claim, the property of Cahlan, Tibbets & Folsom, a two-foot ledge has been struck. An average sample yielded in gold $16.50 and $3.80 in silver.

A MENACE FOR NEVADA

Have Press and Legislature Conspired to Wreck the State?

The promoters of the lottery confess to greater confidence that their measure will pass the legislature. This can only be accomplished by wholesale bribery, and—this is no idle utterance—should the bill pass, the bribe givers and the bribe receivers will be given a run for their money in the daily press of Reno, which is not affected by the unaccountable lethargy which seems to have suddenly overcome the other papers in the State. There also remain the courts of justice and the guilty—should there be any guilty—will answer to indictment for this heinous crime.

Esau sold his own birthright, but the corrupt Nevada legislators—should there be any such—will be charged with selling the priceless birthright of every citizen of this commonwealth.

The JOURNAL still believes in the honor and honesty of the men in whom the people of Nevada have entrusted confidence and to whom they have given the power to make our laws. But there may be alluring temptations, splendid prices offered for their honesty, and a few weak ones may yield to temptation.

To such, if such there be, the JOURNAL offers this word of advice: Don't sell out unless you get enough to enable you to suddenly and forever leave the State you have dishonored, whose prospects you have blighted and whose reputation you have destroyed.

Let the press of the State awake to the danger that threatens the commonwealth and sound the note of warning.

SMALL BOYS IN THE TOILS

Seven tough boys of tender age were caught in the police drag net yesterday afternoon. They were not doing anything extremely wicked, not committing any capital offense, but simply making abominable nuisances of themselves.

A telephone message came from the Riverside mill office informing the cops of certain misdeeds being committed down that way. Officers McNeilly and Leeper gathered the kids in.

They were playing a game called "Getting Away from the Cops." It consisted in climbing onto the roof of one of the Wieland Brewery cold storage houses, leaping a distance of four feet onto an adjoining building and climbing the eaves to a gable window and thence to the ground floor, unclipping the doors and leaving the place to the mercy of petty larceny thieves and hobos.

This "league of seven" is up to all sorts of innocent sport, from gauding the cops to smashing windows in Chinatown. They were released on their own recognizance until 2 o'clock this afternoon when they will play?

Murdered by Redskins.

William Moore of Carson Valley was murdered by Indians the other day and his house looted and burned. The redskins down that way are getting a reputation like unto that of the Apaches. About a year ago they killed the son of the principal land owner in the valley.

Two Boxes Out.

Boxes 7 and 34 of the fire alarm system are out of service. They were burnt out the other night, due to crossed wires, but they will be replaced as soon as possible. Box 7 is at the intersection of Fourth and Sierra streets and box 34 is at the University.

By the Carloads.

Yesterday the Monarch Saloon company received another carload of the celebrated Anheuser-Busch, the only eastern beer on draught in this city. Messrs. Bryson & Cobb are handling great quantities of this wholesome beverage.

The National Live Stock Association.

The national Live Stock Association will hold its Fourth Annual Convention at Salt Lake City, Utah, January 14th to 18th inclusive. This meeting of the Association promises to be an unusually interesting one to stockmen. It is hoped that all interested in the stock business of Nevada will attend this convention. The Southern Pacific Company has made a rate of one fare for the round trip between points in Utah and Nevada to Salt Lake City. The tickets will be good in each direction for continuous passage only and will be void for passage on the return trip after January 31st, 1901.
